Let's Start!

Can you predict the future?

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about people's jobs and places of work in communicative situations.

Ask your partner:

- What career field are you in?
- What career field interests you? Why?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about jobs and work.
- I can talk about things, actions and events in the future.
- I can talk about possible actions or events.

Let's Explore!

Peter talks about future work possibilities in a career field.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

John: How is your internship going, Peter? Anything new?

Peter: It's going well. I have an idea about a career field I may explore.

John: Oh yeah? What will you do, Peter?

Peter: Right now I'm working in marketing. I might go into advertising or communications.

John: Advertising?

Peter: Yes, online advertising in particular. In the future, online advertising will be more direct than print or television advertising. The ads people see will be based on their own lifestyle and interests. If they like travel, they will come across ads from travel agencies. If they like to do home renovations, the ads will be about construction materials. This is called targeted advertising.

John: That may be the case. What do you think, Vanessa?

Vanessa: It could be true. People will want to contribute their ideas online. Interactive advertising may also be very popular in the future.

Let's Practice!

John asks Peter: "What will you do?" How does he respond?

Learning Points

Modals for Possibility

You use the modals may, might or could to show possibility. They have the same meaning.

They are placed before a verb in the base form. The verb does not change.

Examples:

- I have an idea about a future work possibility I may explore.
- I might go into a career in advertising or communications.
- That may be the case.
- It could be true.
